To Michael Wegs, the editor of this document and my co-founder of the Minnesota chapter of the Survivors Network of those Abused by Priests, I'm glad you are alive! Your wit and conversation has buoyed me up.

To A. W. R. Sipe, thank you for your input and encouragement. I received an abundance of both. You are a treasure. My heartfelt thanks also, for going the extra mile to help me in San Diego when I needed it the most.

To Gary Schoener, thank you for your kindness, conversation, and perspective. Kindness heals what medicine cannot. Kindness teaches what books cannot. Kindness speaks what words cannot.

To Tom Doyle, thank you for teaching so many how to question authority for the sake of innocence and righteousness. Thank you for 'getting it.' Thank you for your diligence and compassion. Thank you . . . for the chemo monkey. You earned the yellow ribbon.

To Jeffrey Anderson and your staff at Jeff Anderson & Associates, thank you for your trust, respect, and your boundless energy. You have set the bar high for integrity. My deepest thanks also, for giving an angel the 'wings' she needed to leave her footprints in the sand.

To survivors of sexual misconduct, I work for you. I owe you all a debt of immense gratitude for your compassion, your candor, and your courage. You inspire me. This report was dedicated to you long before I typed this page. It was dedicated to you as I read your e-mail messages and listened to you on the phone. It was dedicated to you while I combed through newspaper articles detailing your stories. It was dedicated to you as I spent hundreds of hours in the sub-basement of a metropolitan library researching your perpetrators. To those who have yet to break your silence, this is dedicated to you in hopes that one day soon you will feel safe enough to come forward. While you wait for that time, never trade hope for despair.

To B. C. P., I hope you got a room with a view

Preface

From my position as a survivor of sexual abuse by Roman Catholic clergy, I enjoy a rather interesting freedom of speech and thought. Civil, moral, and ethical codes notwithstanding, I answer only to my Maker, my curiosity, and my anxious need to matter. At any given moment, I'm not sure which of the previous are the most rigorous to follow. In the instance of this report, certainly my curiosity and my need to matter directed my work.

In 2002, the Catholic world in the United States received a wake-up call in the form of all global media disclosures of the clergy sexual abuse scandal breaking early in the year and continuing relentlessly today. Like many other people, I was glued to the newspapers, radio, television, and the Internet, reviewing reports about something with which I was all too familiar: sexual abuse by Catholic religious figures who were entrusted with the spiritual care of those in their congregations.

Unlike some victims/survivors who watched and listened at that time, I never felt any of my old wounds opening up. Though I felt bitter sadness for the numbers of new folks breaking their silence, I was encouraged by another round of publicity, the opportunity to meet others who knew what I had known for a long time, and the hope that this time more lay people would pay attention.

Along with this necessary and overdue cleansing, I also felt that an accounting was in order with specific regard to the past sexual crimes that had been covered up by the hierarchy. Toward that end, and with either arrogance, confidence, or a healthy combination of both, I wrote to Pope John Paul II. Among other things in this correspondence, I requested that the names of ALL clergy, formerly or presently accused of being involved in criminal acts, be released so that this sin of secrecy would not continue. I also asked Pope John Paul II to identify publicly all locations/assignments so that congregations worldwide could heal and neighborhoods and communities could establish safeguards to prevent or reduce the occurrence of future abuse. I sent my letter in April of 2002, prior to the United States cardinals traveling to Rome to meet with the pontiff.

Not surprisingly, I received no response from the Vatican.

I was quite certain that I wanted specific historical information about sexual abuse by Catholic religious in Minnesota. Public disclosure of this information would afford people the opportunity to be as concerned as I was about the welfare of so many innocent people who had their faith, religious traditions, innocence, and trust used as bait for hideous crimes. I wanted people who had not been directly affected by sexual crimes, to know what had been hidden from them for so long.

In May 2002, I turned my attention to the Ad Hoc Committee on Sexual Abuse of the United States Conference of Catholic Bishops. I wrote a round of letters to each member outlining several requests, again explicitly asking that the names of perpetrators be released, and assignment information for each perpetrator be made openly available to every parish or location in their history.

Again, my request was ignored. I waited with hope that the right steps would be taken toward honesty, and when they were not, I began to dig in and do it myself.

Since I knew right from the start what kind of picture I was trying to paint, the scope of my project was already well defined. What follows is really a collection of data, some tabulation thereof, which should vindicate every victim who has ever come forward in Minnesota to speak their truth about the sexual crimes committed against them.

The problem is bigger than one victim, though it is still individual victims who suffer, tremble, and go the way alone until they sense an atmosphere in which it feels safe to come forward. When that happens, it is no longer the victims who need tremble. It is those who hold much more power and authority who will be brought to their knees for their part in the blight that has infested the Catholic Church.

They will come trembling to the reckoning of their sins, and their crimes, confronting them, will accuse them.¹

Trembling to the Reckoning

Executive Summary

As much as this report about religious sexual abuse in Minnesota is my individual effort, its importance stems from my affiliation with various organizations focused on survivors of sexual abuse. Such a common bond nearly precludes the need for introductions when survivors meet other survivors face to face for the first time. It is the gathering of survivors that vanquishes shame, helps reshape a more positive future for the abused, and extends a hand of Hope where there has been so much despair.

Though this report is a collection of quantifiable data, the heart of the matter is each individual story. What was stolen from victims can only be superficially assessed and never really repaid. I believed it before I began this project and know it for certain as I come to its conclusion.

Lost childhoods can never be graphed. Nightmares and lifetime sentences of prescription medications are impossible to tabulate. Tarnished grief or interrupted grace cannot be represented by a pie chart. The most shocking statistics and percentages can never tell the full story. But the numbers are a good place to begin.

Ninety-nine names of predator priests and religious in positions of authority, trust, and respect in three hundred and two Minnesota assignments somehow seems meager after seven and a half months of work. It isn't: especially not to the victims of the perpetrators named herein. But I don't want to give a false sense of security to those sexual offenders who may still be holding their breath as they scan the list of names. Of those parish assignments still remaining open, one hundred and fourteen are affiliated in some fashion with a parochial school. The access to children alone should shock the reader.

The groove is cut deeper than that, however. Marriage preparation, grief support, coming of age, spiritual guidance, education, leisure, and physical, mental and emotional vulnerability have all been the mechanisms of access to prey upon victims and perpetuate evil. Lies, stonewalling, denial, blaming the victims, and outrageous amounts of money have been the mechanisms by which the discovery of evil has been delayed. Youth camps, retreat centers, altars, rectories, confessionals, offices, and boarding schools have become crime scenes and I doubt that the Christ of the manger, the Christ of the New Testament, the Christ of love would tolerate what those who stand in His place have allowed to continue.

Each individual diocese could have provided the information included in this report. They should have provided it. It would have taken less time, effort, and expense to do so. They were asked and did not respond. Perhaps now they will.

– Minnesota Meditation –

As I stand upon the summit
And look out across the plain,
I can see the north woods weeping.
I can feel the prairie pain.

Cargo ships moored in the harbor
Aren't enough to haul away
All the nightmares from the abbey
Or the places children play.

I can hear the villa echo
With the whisperings of sin.
So I turn my gaze to Heaven,
Wondering where you will begin.

If you seek to heal the wounded,
You must first cast danger out.
If you seek to change the falsehoods,
You must first remove the doubt.

If you seek a new allegiance,
We must make our goals the same.
And you cannot sing your 'Amen'
'Til you've called us all by name.

Minnesota's Religious Sexual Offenders

I believe that naming the names of Minnesota's religious sexual offenders is a high priority for Catholics and the public at large. But it is first necessary to identify these sexual predators. As an interested party, I have collected and filed media reports, articles, and stories, both print and electronic forms, related to this issue.

My initial collection was meager and inadequate, but I have now supplemented this information by accessing online archives³ of Minnesota newspapers to document sexual misconduct of clergy and religious in our state. The database I used has 230 newspaper titles available for search purposes, which allowed me to concentrate on Minnesota publications.⁴

As I read through the news stories, I noted the names of perpetrators, details of the each incident, and the actions being taken. From those notes, I was able to develop a database of Minnesota perpetrators.⁵

Several factors, though, limited the results of the online database:

- 1.) The search headings used, though I tried many
- 2.) Archive constraints within the database – 1986 being furthest back I could research online
- 3.) Index terms under which a particular story may have been archived
- 4.) Deadline for names to be included in this report – February 27, 2004

The list of Minnesota's sexual offenders is NOT exclusive to sexual abuse of minors. Sexual exploitation of vulnerable adults is a felony in Minnesota and it is time the Church answers publicly to these victims. Also included are the names of perpetrators of other types of sexual misconduct, such as possession of child pornography, indecent exposure, or lewd behavior.

My database resources also provided references to a handful of incidents involving abuse by nuns, or non-clergy crimes committed within a Catholic religious setting. I have tabulated this information as well; and these statistics are included the final accounting of criminal sexual conduct that the bishops have attempted to conceal.

Where Did They Serve?

Knowing who the perpetrators are is simply not enough information to establish an historical perspective of the sexual abuse scandal as it relates to Minnesota. I believe that the complacency of the Catholic laity regarding this matter is directly correlated to the failures of Minnesota's bishops (and their political lobby, known as the Minnesota Catholic Conference). They have covered up as many incidents as possible and withheld as much information from the civil authorities as well. Certainly more people would be alarmed if they knew that a perpetrator had served in a parish/institution/assignment in their community. I believe that the members of those communities have a right to know.

The *Official National Catholic Directory*⁶ documents individual assignments for priests as well as other pertinent parish, diocesan, or religious orders information. I have collected the service histories for the offenders on the list developed in Phase One. I have noted the names of Minnesota cities, parishes/institutions, respective dioceses, and the number of identified perpetrators assigned to each site. As many of the assignments as possible have been included in the history of the identified perpetrators. In the instance of possible confusion due to multiple priests with the same name, including middle initials, I did not include information for those years. The directories also have errors and inconsistencies that prohibit absolute assurance of accuracy in individual histories. The information gathered in Phase Two is reflected in its respective database.⁷

While collecting the service history data, I noticed an alarming number of duplications to some parishes, so a number noting the frequency, if more than one, has been included in the table.

Actual individual service histories have not been included in this report, but will be provided upon request. Service histories for non-clergy offenders were not collected.

Sexual Offenders and Their Respective Assignments

As the survivor liaison for the Minnesota Chapter of the Survivors Network for those Abused by Priests (MNSNAP), I have taken well over three hundred phone calls in the last seventeen months (MNSNAP was established in August 2002). Many of these calls are from victims whom I have already met; they just wanted to check in with me about the status of our volunteer, self-help group.

Some callers, however, are victims who have yet to come forward with their own stories, but want information about either their hometown parish, or a specific sexual offender. Immediately after we launched MNSNAP here in Minnesota, I knew that somewhere down the line, this report would be as beneficial a resource to them as the list of mental health professional I had developed for referral purposes.

Aside from naming perpetrators and the numbers of assignments affected across Minnesota, it was also necessary to be readily able to name exactly which offender had served a particular city in Minnesota.⁸

Statistical Summary

The final phase of this research project is the tabulation of information I collected and then, to draw a useful statistical picture of the religious sexual abuse problem from a Minnesota perspective. Though there may be bleaker pictures in other parts of the country, Minnesota is my home and, consequently, victims living in Minnesota or people who were victimized here are MNSNAP's primary concern and the survivors with whom I have the most contact.

Of the 99 alleged clergy offenders named in this report, there were 63 diocesan priests. Perpetrators affiliated to Orders were as follows:

M.S.F.	1
O.M.I.	1
O.P.	2
O.S.B.	15
O.S.C.	11
S.S.C.	1
T.O.R.	4
Unknown	1

Of the 99 sexual offenders named, four had assignments as military chaplains at one time or another. One priest/perpetrator served in each of the following branches: United States Air Force; United States Army; United States Navy; and United States Coast Guard.

Of the non-clergy sexual offenders named in this report, there were five cases of sexual abuse by nuns noted and the affiliation to Orders is as follows

S.S.N.D.	3
O.S.U.	1
Unknown	1

For the 99 priest/perpetrators named in this report, 302 parishes or assignments across Minnesota were affected. Of those parishes remaining open, at least 114 are affiliated with an elementary parochial school. There are also high schools and post-secondary schools that were served by offending clergy.

An exact percentage of parishes served by offending clergy is extremely difficult to calculate due to closings, consolidations, or name changes, which may not have been noted.

The way a particular parish was counted in the Official National Catholic Directory is also a determining factor as well as a few incomplete service histories of individual offenders.

But, the following general approximations can be made for comparative purposes:

Diocese of Crookston: 26% of the parishes were served by sexual offenders;
Diocese of Duluth: 24% of the parishes were served by sexual offenders;
Diocese of New Ulm: 44% of the parishes were served by sexual offenders;
Diocese of St. Cloud: 26% of the parishes were served by sexual offenders;
Diocese of SPM: 45% of the parishes were served by sexual offenders;
Diocese of Winona: 35% of the parishes were served by sexual offenders.

Retirement Pay

The total number of years that perpetrator priests were supported by diocesan retirement dollars, as documented in their service histories, is as follows: Diocese of Crookston, 24 years; Diocese of Duluth, 3 years; Diocese of New Ulm, 36 years, Diocese of St. Cloud, 21 years; Archdiocese of St. Paul & Minneapolis, 46 years, and Diocese of Winona, 19 years. The total number of years Minnesota Catholics have supported sexual offenders identified in this report is 149 years. I hope that will be considered the next time an appeal for donations comes from individual dioceses. The retirement years for those affiliated with Orders were not generally noted.

The day after my deadline for including names of perpetrators in this report, I received 29 additional names.

Recommendations

In many ways, the problem of religious sexual abuse can be addressed with a very simple framework. Ironically, and perhaps rather naively, I would still like to think that turning to the gospels and living by the guidelines set therein is the answer. It hasn't been successful, however, even after 2000 years. The strategic plan that SNAP has offered the Catholic bishops, for example, is a corrective management accountability framework. Archbishop Harry J. Flynn and the bishops of Minnesota ought to embrace this proposal for the safety of our most vulnerable citizens, as well as the protection of our faith.

- 1.) Support the extension of limitations affecting the sexual abuse of children and vulnerable adults. As victims have slowly, painfully made the decision to take their cases to court, the church has used these statutes as a weapon to bar the door to religious sexual offenders.
- 2.) Hold the bishops accountable. It is now clear that the American hierarchy not only willingly chose to conceal records of abuse from parishioners and the civil authorities, but also engaged in trafficking predators from parish to parish and even from diocese to diocese (Palm Beach, Fla., Phoenix, Ariz.; Santa Fe, N.M.; and Amarillo, Texas, have been identified via media reports and legal actions, and data included in this report indicts dioceses in MN as well). As prosecutors file charges, they should consider bishops as co-conspirators, or even principals, based upon their willful involvement in concealing criminal activity.
- 3.) The judiciary and state legislatures should revise employment and criminal statutes that allow the hierarchy to escape punishment.
- 4.) State legislatures must revise charitable-immunity laws, such as Massachusetts', which may make it impossible for any survivor/victim to recover more than $20,000 at the settlement phase of litigation. These laws, enacted to protect the charitable activities of religious organizations, schools, and social-service agencies, have too often created an unbreachable wall behind which the hierarchy continues to hide.
- 5.) Turn over all criminal allegations to the police and prosecutors.
- 6.) Swiftly, severely, and publicly discipline any church staff member who is discovered to have kept quiet about questionable behavior.
- 7.) Revise privacy laws to exempt pedophile allegations and force the hierarchy to open personnel records to the civil authorities when a crime is reported.

- 8.) Confessed sexual offenders must be tried and sentenced in a court of law. The Church must expel priests, deacons, and monks from ministry just as teachers, doctors, lawyers are not permitted to continue their profession when convicted of pedophile crimes.
- 9.) Appoint MNSNAP members to clergy sexual abuse committees.
- 10.) Attend MNSNAP meetings on a regular basis to provide pastoral care to survivors/victims.
- 11.) Conduct listening sessions with MNSNAP members in ALL parishes where a sexual predator has served. The underlying issue of clergy sex crimes for Catholics, in particular, is that the abuse is also equated with incest. Incest destroys the fidelity of family life: most relatives do not believe the victim; some feel sympathy but are unable to accept the truth; and maybe one or two relatives believe. This issue is like lead paint or asbestos. The debris must be removed before the restoration can begin.
- 12.) Review annually with the laity significant information regarding administrative and financial protocol and records. As "shareholders" Roman Catholics deserve a "plain English annual report" that details the financial and business activities of their own diocese. The bishops have demonstrated that they cannot be trusted to protect the lay members in their care. They should not have sole access to the diocesan investment portfolio, which many consider as their own private piggy bank.
- 13.) Publish MNSNAP meeting schedules in all parish bulletins, diocesan publications, and on church websites.
- 14.) Designate Abuse Prevention Sunday, in which every priest educates parents about the need to talk with their children about how to protect themselves and what to do if someone  tries to molest them.
- 15.) Provide written materials in all churches and schools about "safe touch" and abuse prevention strategies for parents.
- 16.) Publicly urge victims to report their abuse to civil and criminal authorities (instead of or in addition to church officials).
- 17.) Encourage and support the publication of survivors' writings, journals, and collected stories, as well as survivor research.

- 18.) Regularly invite local survivors to make presentations at diocesan training conferences for priests and laity to promote the exchange and collaboration of information and ideas.
- 19.) Regularly invite local survivors to make presentations to seminarians to support the development and formation of their vocations.
- 20.) Every state bishop should publish an honest pastoral letter about the sexual abuse crisis in his diocese.
- 21.) Publicly restore the good names of ALL victims who have brought forward credible allegations of sexual crimes, whether directly, by virtue of their explicit permission, or indirectly by exonerating them in a message of gratitude for doing the right thing.

Conclusion

The goal of this report is to provide factual information as an historical basis for us to understand the scope and nature of the sexual abuse crisis in Minnesota. Consequently, we are able to shape our understanding of the larger picture and to fashion our responsibilities according to our community values and religious heritage. While the behavior from the hierarchy remains largely confrontational, I believe that the gaping wound can't be healed until the full extent of the damage has been assessed. This assessment will not be completed until all names are named, all parishes are fully informed and engaged in the healing process; and victims are called forth and welcomed to break their silence without fear of threats or reprisals for the telling the truth about what has happened to them.

The intent of this report is not to widen the chasm between these factions. It is an attempt to invite all parties to an honest dialogue about these faith-altering issues. It has not been enough to isolate a particular group of offenders or victims and think that these problems have been addressed. Many more layers need to be exposed.

Parishes are neighborhoods. To harbor a sexual offender or allow one to remain in service not only puts congregations, but also neighborhoods and in many cases, entire towns at risk. Communities of worship are faith families and the damage done by a sexual predator is more than a wound to one. It also tears the family apart and isolates the one who was victimized. It is time for the entire family to participate in the healing.

I am a survivor of religious sexual abuse. I will be okay. I choose to keep the hierarchical structures that permitted my abuse, covered it up, and then denied it, at arm's length. But arm's length does not mean out of sight. There is still much to do. As soon as I type the last word – the next report will have already begun, and the phone will continue to ring.

I still pray. I always have and always will. I pray that I may find the way I can help the most and then I go to work. In the course of that work, I am confronted with many things that call me back to prayer.

I pray that Minnesota's victims of religious sexual abuse can heal. I pray that the Catholic community will now, more than ever before, speak up and demand better from those who have been in authority.

I pray that those who still keep painful secrets do not add their names to the growing list of sacrificial lambs, but rather to the growing list of my colleagues who are learning to look ahead with Hope!
