

I met Jayne while working at the Center for Education Technology and we became quite friendly. One day Jayne invited me to join the Scrabble by the Sea weekend. I thought my husband would enjoy it - he would play Scrabble and I would enjoy the Dead Sea! However, I joined in, learned the game and got bitten by the bug! So we joined the Tel Aviv club and started attending the games. Jayne always phoned to find out why we didn't come and we met at all sorts of functions apart from at work. When we all went down for the games organized by the Jerusalem Branch at the Dead Sea, Jayne, Evan and Omri actually played instead of doing all the work. Jayne was in the section I was in. After 9 games, Jayne was neck and neck with Aubrey from Eilat. I was to play him in the last game - and whether I won or lost meant nothing to me as I was nearly bottom of the table - but it meant the difference between whether Jayne or Aubrey won the section. Evan and some other members of the Tel Aviv Club came to me and explained how important it was that I won. I sort of laughed because in my first game with Aubrey, he had won 400 to 200. Well, I was very lucky - I got all the good tiles and I was very happy when I won - not for me - but for Jayne. Attached is the picture of her being presented with the prize. Jayne was a cheerful soul and a person whom I will sorely miss. Her courage and fortitude was something to be admired and copied. May her memory be for a blessing to all her family and to all of us . Fay Morris.
